GERMAN DRIVE HAS DIED DOWN

FRENCH AND AMERICAN RESISTANCE TOO STRONG FOR HUN TROOPS.

(By the Associated Press)
The German offensive west of the Oise river has died down somewhat in its sixth day and the enemy has made slower progress in the present movement than in any of the other three he has tried to carry out since March 21. French resistance has been growing stronger and yesterday the Germans despite heavy attacks on high positions around Mery, were unable to gain and suffered heavily from French fire. Along the Oise the enemy has been thrown back across the Matz river and his attempts to regain the south bank of the river have been unsuccessful. South of the Aisne the Germans on a front of three miles have pushed the French back only about one mile in two days. Between the southern edge of Villers-Cotterets forest and Chateau American troops celebrated the first anniversary of their arrival in France by repulsing violent enemy attempts to drive them from recently won positions at Belleau wood and Bouresches. Bad weather is hampering infantry operations on the Italian front but artillery fighting is intense.

He was alone in the airplane over Kelley Field when it fell. Cuts and bruises about his face and body were the chief injuries suffered. O'Brien was conscious when aid reached him and his chief concern was over his new trousers, which he feared had been ruined.

Paris, June 14.—Germany, although attacking on the western front, is starving, says the Echo de Paris. An article appearing in the Berlin Arbeiter Zeitung relates the details of the six children starving to death in an orphanage at Zenefort, Thuringia.

Professor Franz E. Hein, the widely-known economist, writing in the Bayerischer Zeitung, Munich, warns the Germans that the coming weeks will be harder than any that have passed and professes to foresee a general paralysis in the supply of wheat.

Washington, June 14.—The food situation in Germany is such that the best informed judge it as "somewhat desperate," according to Professor Hein's article published in Cologne, June 9. "That probably is the reason why the Empire is continuing to send with out reckoning her soldiers to butchery," he says.

Ada is not on a boom and no one has any particular desire to see one but all are highly gratified with the steady growth of the young city. In spite of the high cost of materials and labor more building is going on today than at any previous time in the history of the city and still more would be building if materials could be had in large quantities. A vacant house would be a curiosity in Ada.

No doubt the dinner Hindenburg promised the Germans he would eat in Paris on April 1 has spoiled by this time, but he can appease his appetite with crow if he is becoming hungry. The Americans have a special fondness for goat and expect to dine off of the Kaiser's angora before many months.

As the shade trees on the streets of Ada increase in size the appearance of the city is correspondingly improved. The citizens have been diligent in this particular ever since the place began to settle up and as a result we now have some beautiful and attractive streets and others are becoming more attractive with each passing year.

The Ukrainians are finding themselves in the same plight as the man who opened his door to the hungry lion. The Germans, disregarding their peace treaty, insist on pushing their troops to every corner of the country, despite the protests of the natives, and the Ukrainians are learning from sad experience what Hun rule means.

THE WRONG WAY AND THE RIGHT.

The motives of Durant's Knights of Liberty, who flogged "Red" Scott and labeled him convict, thug and loafer, were doubtless worthy, but their methods are faulty. Mob law is wrong, and the Durant affair was a demonstration of mob law, no matter what the perpetrators call themselves, nor what patriotic impulses prompt their activity. Besides being unlawful, the mob is apt to be unfair, and the Durant vigilantes were no exception to this rule. Doubtless this Scott person is a wholly undesirable citizen, as bad, perhaps, as indicated by those who chastised him. In the first place, Scott was in jail and was therefore being punished for his offense, or awaiting legal hearing, or both, and the law, having made a start, should, in all fairness have been permitted to finish the job. Then, following the whipping, Scott took advantage of his opportunity to flee from Durant, and later will inflict himself on some community which knows him not. That is obviously unfair to that unfortunate community.

But this is no time for loafing, mooching or living on one's wits, and it is easy to understand the ire of the Durant citizens. There is a right way to handle it, however. In part, it is being touched at the right angle by her own police department. With recent days they have rounded up vagrancy suspects in numbers, and these will pay the penalty for loafing, or go to work, or both. To that extent the local plan is right. It is wrong, no doubt, in that it is incomplete. It doesn't go after the loafer who may feel respectable, but isn't, because he has money in abundance, and takes his idleness in favored places. There is no doubt there are that kind, as there have ever been, and a way must be found to reach them.

Those within the draft age will be brought to time by Crowder's "work or fight" order. But there are older ones and younger who may still go unscathed unless some other means is found to make them serve. A Kansas town has adopted an ordinance requiring all men from the ages of sixteen to sixty-five to register, and show they are regularly employed at least five days a week, if physically able. Other cities should adopt that rule, and this state should follow the example of New York, New Jersey, Delaware and others, which have anti-loafing laws, applying alike to rich and poor, high and low and everyone in between. Nor is it quite enough just to be busy; the time has come when one's occupation should also be useful.—Oklahoma City Times.

USE COMMON SENSE.

Some of the patriotic people of Pontotoc County, and more especially Ada, seem to have the wrong idea about men who are in the draft age. The statement is generally made that certain men ought to be in the army, that they are slackers and all such stuff as that. It is as grave a matter to unjustly designate a man a slacker as it is to speak disrespectfully of a woman. The man who speaks of another as a slacker without knowing him to be such, is an agitator and a trouble maker and his remarks operate to break down the morale of the second line army.

The United States government has decided upon selective conscription as the best way to raise an army. The law is the fairest ever known in any country. Mistakes have been made in the classification, as was natural. These mistakes are being rectified as rapidly as possible. The Council of Defense has asked all local councils to report any mistakes that have been made. These are being investigated and corrected. The same will be done if there are more.

A young man in the draft age is under no obligation to offer himself for service before he is called; and in fact the government is not prepared to take care of soldiers as well when they enlist as it is if they go with the regular draft contingents.

The war will probably be long. It is entirely likely that every man in the draft age will be called to the colors. Men with wives and children will have to leave them behind. God knows it will be hard enough on them not only on the men who fight but on the women at home. Instead of talking disrespectfully about these boys, give them every boost you can. Soon they will be fighting your battle. Many of them will not come back. Some will come back crippled for life and unable to make a living. Give them what help you can while they are with us.

We want to do our part; Pontotoc county is certainly not a slacker county. But we want to guard against going too far to the other extreme. The quota for class 1 throughout the nation is 25%. Pontotoc's percentage is more than 27. Some counties are as low as 10%. If we push out more than our share of men, it means that we shall have to carry not only our part of the burden but the share of other counties. Instead of trying to shove our men off faster than the government asks for them, we should husband our man power. The women and children must be provided for. Money must be made and taxes paid. Food must be produced. Industry must go on. Some men must be left. If any are to volunteer it ought to be the men above the draft age, for there is no other way for them to get in.

Pontotoc county has an enviable record, better than almost any other county in the country. Let's do everything we are asked to do, but let's not for a minute forget that we must be guided in all things by common sense, and that the draft law will take the young men as they ought to be taken and as soon as the government needs them.

SHORT STORIES OF ATHLETIC WORLD

(By the Associated Press)
St. Louis, June 14.—Nick Cullop, the left hand pitcher who came to the St. Louis Americans in a trade with the New York Yankees last fall gives no indication of wishing to join the local club and business manager Quinn has come to the conclusion that he will not report this season. It was expected that Cullop would report for spring training at Shreveport, La., and attempt an adjustment of salary differences, but nothing has been heard from him.

Kansas City, Mo., June 14.—As vindication of the Western league's plan of starting the season May 1, this year, instead of April 15, President E. W. Dickerson, whose headquarters is in Kansas City, points to the fact that in the first 16 days of the schedule only one out of the sixty-four games was postponed. President Dickerson said he contended for a late start when the schedule was being considered because it was his belief that only one in ten Aprils is warm and clear enough for baseball. He said that club owners of the Western league in the past had lost considerable money because of postponed games early in the season.

Urbana, Ill., June 14.—A school for training athletic coaches will again be conducted at the summer session of the University of Illinois, which opens June 17. The course, which is intended to fit men to become coaches of high school and academy teams, will last six weeks.

Instruction will be given by the quartet of coaches that compose the staff of the athletic department at the university. George Hugg, athletic director, will instruct in the rudiments and finer points of baseball. Coach Zuppke will teach the strategies and formations of the football field. Coach Harry Gill will tell how to train men for the track and field events, and Coach Ralph Jones will teach basketball plays.

Although the enrollment for the remainder of the courses in summer school fell off greatly last year, the school for athletic coaches was affected but little. Men who attend are given practical instruction on the football field, the diamond, the track and the basketball floor, in addition to the chart talks.

Columbia, Mo., June 14.—Some one asked Lieut. Robert Simpson when he visited here recently if his several months of army training had unfitted him for track work. Just to decide the question, Simpson doffed his khaki, slipped into a track suit and with several time keepers clocking him stepped the 60-yard high hurdles in 7 4-5 seconds. This time equals the world's record in that event.

Simpson, who left the University of Missouri to enter the army, watched the recent Missouri Valley track meet. While here he gave exhibitions of grenade throwing and incidentally ran several hurdle races with the same speed and agility that made him world's champion.

Milwaukee, Wis., June 14.—A. Rankin Johnson, pitcher with the Milwaukee club of the American Association, plans to follow the example of his father and enlist in the army. He does not propose to join the service, however, until the end of the baseball season, because he wants to earn enough money to support his wife and two children.

"My father and two brothers already have enlisted and I hope to see the entire family enrolled before fall," Johnson said.

Johnson's father was a lieutenant in the Spanish-American war and still retains that commission. He expects to be in France before July 1.

Chicago, June 14.—Eddie McGorty, the Oshkosh, Wis., middleweight, now a member of the National army at Camp Grant, and Phil Harrison, of Chicago, will meet in a return match in Racine, Wis., on June 21. In their first meeting Harrison surprised his followers by flooring McGorty and holding him fairly even.

Milwaukee, June 14.—Bob Moha and Gus Christie, rival Milwaukee middleweights, will meet in a ten round contest here on June 14 in a benefit for Moha's brother, Eddie, a welterweight, who was recently seriously injured as a result of a knockout at the hands of Jock Malone of St. Paul. Other boxers on the program have agreed to give part of their purses to the injured boxer's cause.

ITALIANS CAPTURE TWO MONSTER HYDROPLANES

Headquarters Italian Army, June 14.—Three of the monster type of Austrian hydroplanes recently have been brought down almost intact, and with their occupants are now behind the Italian lines. They are called the K 211, K 383, and K 388. All of these K-type of machines are enormous structures with three motors of 400 horse power, carrying three men and a thousand pounds of bombs.

The K 388 was the last to be captured after it had made an early morning flight of observation near Venice. Crossing the Piave lines just back of Venice, the big car scattered bombs on the Camps and sprayed its machine gun on the men be-

A Call to Every American

War Savings Stamps are a call to the thrift and patriotism of every American—a call that must be met by every man, woman and child who shares the blessings of this free country, if we are to carry on this war as a united people.

What They Are

War Savings Stamps are the most democratic form of government securities ever issued—a profitable, simple and secure investment backed by the entire resources of the government and people of the United States. They steadily increase in value from the date of purchase to the date of maturity—this increase is guaranteed by the government.

These stamps are issued in denominations of $5.00. Thrift Stamps 25 cents each.

The $5 War Savings Stamps

The $5 War Savings Stamp is a stamp for which the government will pay you $5 on January 1, 1923. Its cost to you if bought in February, 1918, is $4.13 (this cost increases one cent each month during 1918)—that is 4 per cent interest, compounded quarterly.

Simple, Secure

You don't have to figure interest, nor clip coupons, nor worry about the safety of your loan; the certificates are not transferable, and behind them are the wealth and taxing power of the richest country ever known. You can get your money back, on 10 days' notice, any time you need it.

THOUGHT EACH DAY WOULD BE HER LAST

Mrs. Johnson Wants Others to Find Relief as She Has By Taking Tanlac.

"I don't know any better New Year wish I could make all suffering people than that they may find the wonderful relief Tanlac has brought me," said Mrs. Jake Johnson of 1520 Hemphill street, Ft. Worth, Texas.

"For seven years," she continued, "I suffered from stomach trouble, rheumatism and painful, disordered kidneys. My stomach bothered me a great deal in one way or another and my kidneys caused me constant worry. My back hurt me dreadfully, so bad in fact, I couldn't get down or up without help. I had frequent headaches, intense rheumatic pains in my right arm and both legs and feet. I was so nervous and miserable I could hardly sleep and felt dull, draggy and worn-out in the mornings. My suffering is more than I can explain. I just thought every day would be my last.

"I had tried many medicines but they were absolutely useless to me and I had just about given up all hope. If Tanlac had failed me I don't know what I would have done, but it's the greatest medicine I have ever heard of. In three days after I began using it my appetite improved and I felt better. I can hardly eat enough to satisfy me now. I have already gained ten pounds in weight and feel better in every way. My rheumatism is so much better that I believe it will soon be gone entirely. All my other troubles have left me and I'm so much better off that I feel that I have a new lease on life. My sleep is sound and restful and I get up in the mornings feeling strong and more vigorous. I can walk better than I could in a long time, and I can't praise Tanlac too highly for what it has done and is still doing for me."

Tanlac is sold in Ada by Gwin & Mays Drug Company, and by leading druggists and dealers everywhere.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING AT BATTLE FRONT

London, May 4 (Correspondence of The Associated Press).—British, American and French women working in the war zone have become a factor of importance in the organization of victory," writes Sir Harry Johnston, in the Evening News.

"There is no parallel," he says, "in the German army to the women's work done with our armies. The women in the German Empire are not trusted; they are relegated to home life or to home tasks. They are not fighting with the men at the front, as ours are. The German military commanders and the German army are afraid of women's influence."

One comes well within sight of the German lines, the article starts, before the allied women working as Young Men's Christian Association helpers or as Red Cross nurses are lost sight of.

It is difficult to be too enthusiastic over "the glorious army of hospital nurses," and the writer asks, "Was ever such devotion shown?" "In the hospitals," he goes on, "one may see acting as mere probationers the daughters and granddaughters of great and celebrated men, thankful to be employed in housemaids' work while qualifying for skilled service. I don't think I encountered one silly woman in the whole of my recent experiences in France."

Another question he propounds is, "What has become of women's nerves?" adding: "They seem not specially distressed over the drum fire that keeps all but the most tired fighting men awake at night behind the lines. They are no more inclined to scream over the dropping of bombs than are the men; no more inclined to faint at the sight of blood or terrible wounds, no more disposed to leave their post of duty even though death may fly round it and over it."

All manage, no matter what the nature of their work, to keep as neat and clean as circumstances permit, and they are wisely careful of the appearance of nails and knuckles and have not discarded all that was good in manuring. But the only cosmetics they use are rain water and face creams for chapping and sunburn.

"The mannish clothes necessary to so many war vocations," the article continues, "do not in the least abate real femininity; they can be business-like, curtly-spoken neutrals in work time, and most attractive hostesses or guests when off duty."

"They are developing a hard side—they are becoming pitiless toward inefficiency, especially in the male, and so quietly contemptuous regarding fear or any display of nerves that they check the spread of panic rumors and constrain many a natural timid person to pretend he is rather amused than otherwise in an air raid. Yet I cannot accuse them of undue rashness. When they settle down they generally contrive a good and practical refuge from shell and bomb."

BRONCHIAL ASTHMA

Mrs. Graf Says Vinol Cured Her. Darlington, Pa.—"I suffered from bronchial asthma so badly I would often have to sit up half of the night or lean over the back of a chair, and so weak I could hardly walk across the floor. I had spent lots of money for different asthma medicines without help—but Vinol helped me so I sleep well, and am so well and strong I am doing all my work on the farm."

MILITARY DRILL AT THE NORMAL

A visitor at the normal between the hours of 7 and 11 a. m. any day of the week will see a large company of students on the campus industriously drilling under the command of either Prof. Bradford or Prof. E. C. Wilson. The boys drill the first hour and after that each of the four divisions of the girls spend half an hour at drill and half learning new games under direction of Miss Jones.

This course of military training is being stressed by the normal because many schools make it compulsory and the normal students will be in a position to teach the tactics to their pupils. It will soon be that any youngster on the street will be thoroughly familiar with the order of "squad right, left front into line," etc., and executing such commands second nature to him. The normal is thoroughly alive to the importance of military training and these drills are the first lessons in such training.

As play is as necessary to a child as any other form of activity, the games taught by Miss Jones will give the normal students many ideas of helping the children to amuse themselves when these students become teachers.

INFORMATION ON SOLDIERS' INSURANCE

Sec. Riley of the county board has received a supply of literature covering the matter of soldiers' insurance and family allowances which he advises all who expect to enter the service to secure and read at once. This is a matter of vital importance and every young man should take out a good sized policy on entering the army, for it is very cheap and provides ample protection to his beneficiaries in case of his death or of himself in case of disability.

No Epidemics at Mecca.

Mecca was compared by Burton to Bath, but has been likened by other writers to "Florence without beauty." It has had a full share of flood, fire and sword, but it is said never to have suffered from any serious epidemic, says the London Chronicle.

This seems the more remarkable because the city lies at the lowest level of a valley which must be a cesspool, and the sewage, having no outlet, percolates into the wells. The immunity, ascribed by Mohammedans to miraculous interposition of Providence on behalf of "Mecca the Inviolable," is due to the dry climate, the fact that most of the inhabitants have the fine physical vigor needed for a long journey, and the absence of destitution.

The thousands seen begging are "beggars at a fair," reaping the harvest of wealth brought by pilgrims.

SHE FINDS HERSELF

By ALICE KILLIAN.

"Come right in, Cornelia," said Mrs. Connery hospitably.

Mrs. Connery was rather surprised at seeing Cornelia Barclay so soon after their conversation regarding exemption from military service, and she was very glad to see that the girl harbored no ill feeling toward her for having spoken so plainly. Noticing the pale face and heavy eyes of her guest, she asked: "What's the matter? Aren't you feeling well?"

Cornelia slowly nodded. "I'm all right," she said with an effort, "but Bob—Bob's gone!"

"Gone?" echoed Mrs. Connery, "Where?"

"Rockford! He's in training!"

A glad smile illuminated Mrs. Connery's countenance. "I'm so glad, Cornelia—and you must feel proud! You couldn't help it."

"I am proud," Cornelia assented, "but," sobs came fast, "I'm so lonesome."

Mrs. Connery patted her hand comfortingly. "I know, dear," she murmured.

Cornelia dried her tears. "Don't think I'm hunting sympathy, Mrs. Connery," she said. "I'm not, but I just had to talk to someone, and I knew you'd understand. When I left here that afternoon my mind was in a tumult. You had made me see how selfish I really was, and the question seared my burning brain. Who am I, that my husband should be exempted from service? Am I a slacker? Oh, you don't know how that word shrivels one, when you feel that it may be applied to oneself! I'd say, 'It's Wall street's war; let the rich do the fighting! I'm willing we should fight, to defend our country, but why send our boys abroad to be shot by German shrapnel?'"

"You know what kind of a conscience I have," Cornelia continued. "It never gives me a minute's rest when I feel that I'm in the wrong, and I know that I was all wrong. It isn't a Wall street war; we are fighting for a great principle; our boys are going abroad because we must be protected, and that is the best and only way! Still, I just couldn't see Bob among them."

"When I got home after my talk with you," Cornelia went on, "Bob was waiting for me. I tried to get his views on the military situation, but he'd say very little. We went down to dinner, and at every table all you could hear was war—war! I couldn't eat; I excused myself and went back upstairs. Soon Bob followed, and then we had it out."

"I don't think I ever saw such absolute joy in any man's face as there was on Bob's when I told him I thought he'd better waive exemption. He stared at me stupefied, then, as he finally grasped my meaning, he dropped his head on his hands and sobbed like a baby."

Cornelia's voice choked.

"Little by little he told me just what he'd been up against. Downtown all his friends knew that I had been working for a long time after we married. Also they knew that I had resigned my position, and blamed him for it. They thought he was simply hiding behind my petticoats and evading service. Of course, he wanted to know what had made me change my mind, and—"

Cornelia giggled. "I told him that I'd been listening to an inspired lecture on patriotism, and that I wanted him to go."

"Poor Bob," said Mrs. Connery sympathetically.

"And," continued Cornelia, "Ma Baker, his employer, has been wonderfully kind. Bob said that when he told him he was going to Rockford, Mr. Baker just wrung his hand and said: 'My boy, I'm proud of you. I just couldn't reconcile your hanging back at a time like this, with your previous record.' Poor Bob! Wasn't it a shame that poor, selfish I had placed him in a position where he had to choose between loyalty to his wife or to his country and, by being loyal to me, make everyone think he was a coward and did not love the flag? Mrs. Connery, I just hate myself for my blindness."

"No need of all that self-abasement, Cornelia," said Mrs. Connery. "Being cheerful and doing your bit will make the separation easier, and you know Bob would worry if you regretted his going."

"I don't regret it for one minute," said Cornelia emphatically. "He looks simply great in his uniform, and his heart is in his work. I know Bob will make a good soldier. But," Cornelia struggled with her tears, "I'm awfully lonesome!"

No Epidemics at Mecca.

Mecca was compared by Burton to Bath, but has been likened by other writers to "Florence without beauty." It has had a full share of flood, fire and sword, but it is said never to have suffered from any serious epidemic, says the London Chronicle.

This seems the more remarkable because the city lies at the lowest level of a valley which must be a cesspool, and the sewage, having no outlet, percolates into the wells. The immunity, ascribed by Mohammedans to miraculous interposition of Providence on behalf of "Mecca the Inviolable," is due to the dry climate, the fact that most of the inhabitants have the fine physical vigor needed for a long journey, and the absence of destitution.

The thousands seen begging are "beggars at a fair," reaping the harvest of wealth brought by pilgrims.

No Nutrient in Bouillon.

Bouillon has no more nourishing qualities than hot salt water. All the nutrient is still in the meat from which the broth was made. The bouillon is a stimulant, that is all. There is no more horrible waste than to throw away a piece of meat from which broth has been made.

Arthur Protests.

Arthur was passing a day with his aunt. "I am going to do something to please you on your birthday," she said to the little boy, "but first I want to ask the teacher how you behave at school." DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAMM-BONNER

THE OWL'S TRIP.

"I am tired of the trees and the woods and the outdoor world," said Mr. Owl.

"Why so?" asked Mrs. Owl.

"I would like to see more of the world."

"But you have traveled a great deal," said Mrs. Owl.

"Not enough," answered Mr. Owl. "I am famous for my wisdom, and when a creature is wise it is a splendid thing. But one can't stay wise unless one keeps on educating oneself."

"Whatever do you mean?" asked Mrs. Owl.

"No matter how bright any one may be," said Mr. Owl, "he must keep on studying and learning all the time—all his life."

"A great nuisance for those who don't care about being wise," said Mrs. Owl.

"For them it is different, to-wit, to-woo, very different. They enjoy being stupid. But I enjoy being wise. I must live up to my reputation, and the reputation my grandfather and great-grandfather had before me."

"What makes you use such useless words?" asked Mrs. Owl.

"I have been afraid she had appeared stupid, and so now she wanted to seem very bright."

"What useless words did I use?" asked Mr. Owl.

"You said you wanted to live up to the reputation your grandfather and great-grandfather had for being wise. And you spoke of them as your 'grandfather and great-grandfather before you.'"

"To be sure," said Mr. Owl, "they wouldn't come after me, would they? Grandfathers and great-grandfathers" always come before—just as I will come before my grandchildren and great-grandchildren."

"Quite true," said Mrs. Owl. "But I said you had used useless words."

"Ha, ha, to-wit, to-woo," laughed Mr. Owl.

"A bright owl you are, my dear," he added after a moment.

"Why did you say you were tired of the trees and the woods and the outdoor world?" asked Mrs. Owl.

"Because I want to see more of the world—the inside part of the world. I want to see what houses and hotels are like—apartments and cottages."

"What strange wishes you have!" said Mrs. Owl. "Do you expect me to take this trip with you?"

"No, I go in solitary splendor," said Mr. Owl grandly. "I go to receive knowledge by traveling. And if that knowledge amounts to a great deal I will tell you about it."

So off started Mr. Owl one night when it was very dark. He carried his suitcase made out of the bark of a big tree and its handle was of twisted sprigs.

"I'm going very far," he said to himself. "Very, very far away—to the city!"

It was not long before he reached the outskirts of a town for he had traveled quickly and the woods where he lived were not so very far off, though Mr. Owl felt they were.

"See those buildings," he said to himself. "I think they are stupid. But I will find out. They don't look like trees at all. And they're all lighted up. So foolish I consider."

He found a tree which he perched in for a time, and then he saw a big building. He didn't know what it was for, it had so many windows and so many lights which made him almost blind.

"It can't be a house for so many people never belong to one family," he thought to himself, remembering the number in his own family.

And he was right! It was a great big hotel. But after a time the lights began to go out, many of them. And through an open window flew Mr. Owl.

He was most uncomfortable and as it was almost daylight he began to think about going home when he heard a funny little bell-like sound which was very shrill and horrid. And then a person stirred in the bed, and he heard a sleepy voice say:

"Oh, goodness! There goes the alarm clock. And I have to catch that early train. Oh, look! An owl!" And the person screamed very noisily.

But Mr. Owl flew from the window and back home he went. And he told Mrs. Owl that hotels and rooms and cities and lights and alarm clocks and rushing for trains were not at all plev and he showed his wisdom more than ever by not having had such things in his family."

CHANGE IN TIME SYSTEM OPPOSED

Oklahoma City, June 14.—It was the opinion of those who attended the hearing at the Lee-Huckins Hotel yesterday held to establish the views of the leading interests of the city as to the advisability of changing the time schedule of Western Oklahoma from central to western time, that such a change would not benefit the state. John T. Money, examiner for the interstate commission, declared that he was undecided what recommendations he would make to the

The Chamber of Commerce registered a protest against the change of schedule and the railroad together with some of the principal shipping interests voiced the same opinion.

Hearings have been held on this subject in Atlanta, Jacksonville, Pittsburg, Cleveland, Bismack, Helena, Salt Lake City, Hastings and Oklahoma City. The last will be held in El Paso next Monday after which Money will return to Washington to make his report. There is great diversity of opinion in the various districts, he says.

Money was unable to say what action the commission would take, or when its decision would be reached but he declared it as the desire of the commission to establish the line between central and mountain times as close to the ninety-seventh meridian as possible.

BRITISH SOLDIERS GREAT COLLECTORS OF SOUVENIRS

(By the Associated Press)

London, June 14.—No longer are British soldiers on leave seen streaming out of the big London railroad stations with trophies of the great war in the form of a German helmet, rifle, bayonet or a few odd bombs and shells to decorate the walls of their home.

An army order long since issued but only very recently put rigidly into effect, forbids the carrying off of these trophies from the battle field, and now hawk-eyed military police watch the leave boats.

But all the orders in the world and all the precautions ever invented will not stop souvenir hunters, and the Tommies have the craze worse than the nimble-fingered gentry who used to specialize in railway straps, hotel soap and towels and chips of granite from old castles.

To carry the stuff home the soldiers will try all sorts of subterfuge. They will carry their souvenirs about with them from rest billets to the trenches, sometimes even refusing to dump it when going into action.

They guard their treasures like a diamond for months and will sacrifice little comforts that mean so much in the line in order to stow a harmless German bomb or the fuse cap of a shell in their sack.

Men have left their own rifle with the quartermaster or in some unauthorized quarter and carried off a German one in a waterproof case past the picket at the boat. Pieces of bombs and shell have been bound into puttees because haversacks are liable to be searched and extra pockets have even been sewn into tails of overcoats to hide forbidden souvenirs.
